MUSCAT

Muscat cultivation in Valais dates back to the 16th century. Its excellent reputation can be seen in several historical documents from the 17th and 18th centuries. In the Sierre region, Muscat was cultivated until the reconstruction of the vineyard after the phylloxera infestation in 1930. Since then, the area planted with Muscat has declined sharply since then and has stabilized over the last fifteen years at around 40 hectares.

The vine has become so important and sought-after that it has risen to the nobility of the wine world and is considered a noble grape. The Chardonnay is genotypically related to the Burgundy varieties. A DNA analysis carried out in 1998 revealed that Chardonnay is the result of a natural cross between Pinot and Gouais Blanc.

Pinot Noir

The origin of Pinot Noir is still not entirely clear, but the parent variety Traminer is certain. The father is thought to be the Schwarzriesling. Pinot Noir is known for its ability to mutate, which has led to the giving rise to Pinot Gris and Pinot Blanc, among many other varieties. Apart from the color of the berries, the three varieties differ only slightly. Pinot Nor was probably already known in the French Burgundy already known in the fourth century. There is evidence that it existed in the 14th century. The name for the Pinot Noir was named after the pine cone shape of its grapes (pin=spruce cone).

Merlot

As one of the medium to late-ripening grape varieties, Merlot, which is cultivated in almost all major wine-growing countries has also developed in Valais. It loves soils that are not too dry and finds its ideal conditions on loamy soils, which are often found at the beginning of the slope.

Cornalin

A true treasure of Valais heritage, Cornalin can boast of being one of the oldest grape varieties in the canton. It originates one hundred percent from the Valais. The Cornalin bears few fruits and ripens late and must be planted in very sunny locations. This is why it has discouraged generations of winegrowers.

It owes its return to the limelight to its aristocracy. Its color with violet reflections presents a delicately complex bouquet, a perfect body which, despite a somewhat exuberant youth, is splendid and develops tremendous finesse with age. Rich wine, wild berry flavor, fine nose.

Syrah

Passion and enthusiasm were the witnesses to the marriage of Wallis and Syrah! He gained his reputation in the northern Hermitage wine region of the Côtes du Rhône and later successfully acquired the distant warm landscapes of Australia and California.

Since its introduction to Valais in 1926, this grape has continued to develop with proud success. In sunny slopes, which correspond to its late harvest, the Syrah brings out the best of its concentrated, full-bodied fruit with broad aromas. What a beautiful structure and lasting strength! Arguments that become more and more true with time. Red wine with a very dark color, with a scent of violets, with intense aromas of blackcurrant, elderberry and spices (pepper and clove). This wine with long aging in new oak barrels from Bordeaux (for one year) and accompanies beef, sheep, game and cheese.
